In 1985 Autodesk introduced AutoCAD LT as a stripped-down version of AutoCAD, optimized for use on personal computers running the DOS operating system. Autodesk began to license AutoCAD LT to larger companies and organizations, and the software was widely adopted by civil engineering firms and contractors, and in the mid-1990s AutoCAD LT displaced AutoCAD as the most widely used AutoCAD derivative. Today, AutoCAD is the most popular CAD package, used by engineers in both the private sector and the public sector. In the United States, the National Construction Information and Sharing Agreement (NCISA) System includes AutoCAD as its preferred CAD package for small- to medium-sized projects. CAD in government includes AutoCAD, CATIA and Rastersoft's Vectorworks. One of the most important improvements in AutoCAD's history was the introduction of many non-geometric features, such as the ability to view and edit properties of a component, to define multiple users, to work from multiple windows, and to draw blocks. AutoCAD's ability to read and interpret CAD files created by other software packages is known as interoperability. AutoCAD has always been sold as a bundled product, with the appropriate software licenses bundled in the box. In 1996, Autodesk introduced AutoCAD for small business (AutoCAD 2000), which moved the desktop application away from the Windows operating system and made it easier to use. AutoCAD 2000 was an alternative to GDS 2 and was mostly replaced by versions of AutoCAD LT that were bundled with additional products. In 2002, Autodesk introduced AutoCAD 360, which is a web-based solution (viewable on any internet browser) that connects to local or remote databases and can import or export data directly into other software, even on multiple machines. Autodesk added an online learning program called Autodesk University in 2003 and a new product called AutoCAD 360 Suite that includes AutoCAD 360 as well as the other Autodesk services Autodesk Animate, Autodesk 360 and Autodesk 3D Warehouse. Autodesk released AutoCAD 2008, AutoCAD LT 2008, AutoCAD MEP 2008 and AutoCAD WS 2008. Autodesk also developed software using the new MDX standard: AutoCAD Map 3D, AutoCAD Map 3D 360 and AutoC

America's newest NBA squad, the Milwaukee Bucks, did not play well against the best team in the NBA this past weekend. The Bucks dropped a convincing 115-103 win to the Celtics, who for the record, were playing their final game of a road trip at the State Farm Arena. But it was LeBron James who was the main star in the game, dropping a triple-double (27 points, 12 rebounds, and 11 assists) while contributing with an efficient 15-of-23 shooting. Milwaukee's starting point guard, Giannis Antetokounmpo, was a part of the star-studded Dream Team that played in the 2019 NBA All-Star Game, but he struggled to find much success against his long-time rival. It was Milwaukee's second straight loss against Boston after losing 115-105 to them back in December, but the Celtics and Bucks rivalry has been an entertaining one. The Bucks now have a chance to put a stop to Boston's NBA Finals aspirations with the remaining games of the season, including the Bucks' Wednesday night matchup at the TD Garden. ESPN's national broadcast of the game (as well as the game's pregame show) will be anchored by Rachel Nichols, with analysis from Doris Burke, Tom Tolbert, and Mike Breen. Buckets will be running the studio during the nationally-televised games. Sorry I can't tell you more but it is something like that. Monero, one of the most popular privacy coins, recently passed a pretty significant milestone by reaching the magic $1 billion market cap mark. The Cryptocurrency Market Cap Is So High That $1 Billion Market Cap Isn't Even That Much The market cap for all cryptocurrencies in the world today is $271 billion. However, the market cap for all cryptos that are based on the Bitcoin blockchain is only $77.7 billion. While this is a big chunk of money, it's still a drop in the bucket when compared to the total market cap. Monero has been around since 2014 and has steadily gained in popularity in the past couple of years. The total market cap for Monero is now $1.12 billion. That's not much when compared to Bitcoin's $27.9 billion, but considering that Monero has only been around for five years and has been gaining popularity, it is a bit of a milestone. Monero, Ripple, Ethereum, and Other Privacy Coins Are Earning A Great Return Monero, Ripple, and Ethereum (the other three largest coins by market cap) have been gaining a lot of traction in the past year. All four coins are very popular for their focus on privacy. Each of these coins have been performing very well and are very likely to keep on growing in the future. Monero in particular is a great choice for those that want to keep their transactions private. All four of these privacy coins are especially useful for people in places like North Korea and Venezuela where there are extreme restrictions on what people can and can't do. To enable them to buy cryptos outside of these countries, they need to use anonymizing technologies. While this has many drawbacks, it still gives them the ability to purchase some cryptos. This Is A Big Deal For Monero in Particular While the other privacy coins are working on creating a more open system that makes it easy to send and receive transactions, Monero has focused on privacy the most. Monero's code is very heavily based on zk-snarks, which makes the network and transactions more secure. This is a
