A: Your best bet would be to use the ACF's cacheability functionality. Portland, Maine — The waters of the Ellsworth Road Pond and Billings Reservoir, which span the border between Old Orchard Beach and Kennebunk, were freezing overnight Sunday. Ice was on the surface, so the conditions were ripe for the unusual spectacle of people on foot and in canoes alike wading across the reservoir. In the far northwest corner of Kennebunk, which borders the Northwest Trailway Park on the state border, several young people reportedly were seen jumping on the ice with their shoes and socks on. Local residents had noticed a lot of people from Old Orchard Beach on the frozen pond on Sunday morning. And the Old Orchard Beach Parks and Recreation Department said that large numbers of people from this neighborhood were on the ice. Brett Trahan, Old Orchard Beach department of parks and recreation director, said he and his colleagues grew concerned when they saw many people on the ice from the Old Orchard Beach side of the reservoir — even though Old Orchard Beach is closed to recreation. “We just thought, ‘Uh-oh,’” Trahan said. “Because people are seen on the ice at 5 in the morning, and there is no reason for that.” Trahan said someone heard a couple of people yelling for help in the reservoir. “We just thought that the situation had obviously deteriorated. 6d1f23a050
